“Exercise in the Fight Against Alzheimer’s”

Dr. Jeff Burns

Thursday, Oct. 5, 2017
UC Davis Cancer Center
6:00 – 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Jeff Burns is a Professor of Neurology and co-Director of the Kansas University Alzheimer’s Disease Center. He also directs the Frontiers Clinical and Translational Science Unit and the Alzheimer and Memory Clinic. Dr. Burns’ research program supports testing new approaches to treating Alzheimer’s disease with a focus on how lifestyle issues such as diet and exercise can be used to prevent or delay the onset of Alzheimer’s disease.

With a growing emphasis on facilitating brain health, Dr. Burns’ lecture will review evidence that physical exercise is beneficial for the brain and may be a viable prevention strategy and therapeutic approach for treating Alzheimer’s disease.
