The UC Davis Comprehensive Cancer Center’s unique, integrated cancer research programs, innovative biomedical technologies and cancer health disparities outreach and education earned the prestigious “comprehensive” designation from the National Cancer Institute in 2012.

An achievement made by just a handful of cancer centers nationwide, “comprehensive” designation makes UC Davis the only cancer center of its kind in inland Northern California.

It means patients have access to leading-edge care, including personalized treatments based on the unique characteristics of individual tumors.

The Cancer Center expansion completed in fall 2012 enhances our ability to deliver comprehensive, patient-focused care and our commitment to break barriers to beat cancer.

At the expanded UC Davis Comprehensive Cancer Center, we deliver leading-edge care to our patients and their families in our adult and pediatric clinics, conveniently located under one roof. The 46,000-square-foot addition enables us to further our commitment to breaking barriers to beat cancer by helping ease transitions for children and teens undergoing treatment, stimulating new synergies in research and providing space for specialized clinics.
