Scientific Writing for Publication

Thursday, February 22, 2018
12:00 – 1:30 pm (lunch provided)
Education Building, Room 3207
4610 X Street, Sacramento

Course description:

Asked to describe what he did for a living, an academic colleague thought about it for a moment and said, "I'm a scientific writer." Without discounting the other things health sciences faculty do, writing is surprisingly central. In this seminar, we will discuss the why’s and how’s of academic publishing. Topics to be covered include why publish, what editors are looking for, writing tips, insights into the editorial process, and how to get attention for your work. In addition, participants will have the opportunity to review materials submitted and reviewed by the Journal of General Internal Medicine, where the instructor was Co-Editor-in-Chief from 2009 and 2017.

Presented by:

Richard L. Kravitz, MD, MSPH
Professor and Co-Vice Chair for Research
Department of Internal Medicine
Director, UC Center Sacramento

Register online: http://tinyurl.com/ybpzd72l