The PAETC HIV Learning Network (HIVLN) is a telehealth HIV mentoring, training and consultation program for rural California clinicians managing a small number of HIV infected patients. HIVLN provides free, live, on-line mentoring and consultation sessions for participating clinicians.

Goal: Expand access to high quality HIV care and improve health outcomes for HIV-infected people residing in historically underserved communities in rural California.

What We Do:

- Disseminate and discuss new guidelines and treatment advances
- Convene online discussions among health care providers to share challenging or instructive cases with colleagues
- Provide longitudinal learning opportunities to build capacity, expand knowledge, and develop new skills
- Develop an informed support system and community of learners with guidance from HIV specialists
Bridging the connection between primary care providers and HIV experts

The Pacific HIV Learning Network encourages participation from HIV care teams made up of physicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses, social workers, case managers, mental health workers, health educators, medical assistants, outreach workers and other care team members working together to improve health outcomes for HIV-infected patients.

CONTACT US: To learn more about the PAETC HIV Learning Network, contact Moira Mar-Tang, MPH, CHES at mmartang@ucsd.edu, call 619-471-9521 or visit www.paetc.org.

This program is supported with funds from the Heath Resources and Services Administration (Award No. 1H4AHA22757) with the University of California, San Francisco.