One in five mothers suffers from maternal depression, which can affect children’s health as well. So pediatrician Erik Fernandez y Garcia created a novel intervention that provides motivation to depressed mothers screened at well-child visits. The technique leads more women to seek support and care for their depression – and helps to nurture their youngsters, too.

This is health through innovation.