The UC Davis MIND Institute is a collaborative international research center, committed to the awareness, understanding, prevention, care, and treatments of neurodevelopmental disorders.

“Sounding the Alarm” is a documentary that provides a poignant look inside the lives of those touched by autism. Viewers will share in the journey families face after their children receive an autism diagnosis and search for lifelong services - a journey that is similar for families whose children are diagnosed with other neurodevelopmental disorders. With the increasing number of children in the U.S. affected by autism and other neurodevelopmental disorders, the need for more services and support across the lifespan is urgent.

To RSVP or for more information, please contact Audra Johnson at response@ucdavis.edu or 530-752-3438. Kindly RSVP by February 26th.
