

David Lee, M.D.

Philosophy of Care To me the disciplines of internal medicine and primary care epitomize what a doctor is. As a primary internist, my mission and dedication center on my patients' total health. My goal is to work with patients as a medical advisor and help guide them through their health care. The most important components in care of patients' health are complete understanding of their individual situation and how lifestyle and prevention can play a vital role in maintaining good health.

Clinical Interests David Lee works as a medical advisor and helps guide patients through the health-care system. He feels the most important aspects for patients' health are a complete understanding of their individual situation and how lifestyle and prevention can play a vital role in maintaining good health.
