

Jack Jue, Jr., M.D.

Philosophy of Care	I enjoy getting to know patients and families personally, and I like the broad range of skills that family practice demands. I care for people of all ages, from newborns to the elderly. I place strong emphasis on working with each patient as a partner in his or her health decisions. I believe in getting to know my patients as people and in listening to their concerns fully. I feel that lifestyle aspects relating to diet, exercise and emotional well-being are extremely important in attaining good health. I consider myself to be part of a community-based primary care network of dedicated physicians who believe in personal, compassionate care. We also are supported by the technical expertise of the university hospital and its specialty services.
Clinical Interests	As a family physician, Jack Jue Jr. places a strong emphasis on working with each patient as a partner in health care decisions. He also maintains that lifestyle aspects related to diet, exercise and emotional well-being are extremely important to good health.
