

Anoosh Malaekheh, M.D.

Philosophy of Care	I have lived in Fair Oaks off and on for most of my life. I completed my training at UC Davis Medical Center and now enjoy participating in a practice setting that's not only nurturing and beneficial for my patients, but also challenging and rewarding for me. I chose pediatrics as my specialty in my first year of medical school. Children are inquisitive, joyful and trusting—all the traits that most of us outgrow to some extent. Although children's illnesses and psychosocial problems may be quite difficult and complex at times, I became a pediatrician to provide the maximum positive influence on their lives as they grow to become healthy, well-adjusted young adults. I perform primary care for infants, children and adolescents, with active parental involvement. I would like my patients and their parents to see me as more than a doctor who treats earaches and colds. I also want to become my patients' confidante as well as the entire family's trusted friend and guide.
Clinical Interests	Anoosh Malaekheh provides primary care for infants, children and adolescents in a setting that is nurturing as well as beneficial to his patients. In addition to treating child illness and psychosocial problems, Malaekheh has clinical interests in pediatric orthopaedics and sports-related injuries.
