Philosophy of Care

I believe strongly in evidence based medicine, but also in tailoring the treatment plan to the individual patient and family. I value open communication and strive to make sure that families understand both the big picture and the details of the medical condition. A new medical diagnosis in a child is often a time of crisis for families; I recognize the stress that the diagnosis generates and will do my best to help ease fears. When a child has a particularly rare condition, I love seeking input from outside experts.

Clinical Interests

I have a longstanding interest in genetics, and have a particular interest in endocrine conditions in children with genetic conditions (including differences in sex development, pituitary hormone deficiencies and disorders of puberty). I also care for children with a wide range of other conditions, including type one diabetes, thyroid conditions, bone disorders and short stature.

Research/Academic Interests

Currently, I am active in research looking into how family functioning affects blood sugar control in children with type 1 diabetes. This is part of a larger effort -- our diabetes clinic as a whole is wholeheartedly committed to improving care for diabetic children. I am also active in pediatric resident educational efforts and medical student teaching.
